Gulliver in Lilliput land couldnt have been more amazed than I was when I wandered into Dolldom at Bloomingdales. Dolls of every nation, dolls that wa k, dol. that sleep, blond dolls, brunette dolls, pink cheeks and golden hair, dressed in silk and satin, and dressed in muslin.

"Hello, Horace," they seemed to say, "tell the girls we want homes. Well be the best children in all the world, will only speak when spoken to, will keep our company manners, and love-our little mothers to death." Little dolls and big dolls, fat dolls and thin dolls, jolly dolls and serious dolls, and oh, so cheap. I'll bet one will smile at you Christmas morning, and chirp: "Merry Christmas, mother, and a Happy New Year."
